

PUT TO FLIGHT.

Miss Christina Buhler Proves Too Much for Two Burglars.

With a Revolver She Defends Herself and Another Woman.

THE DESPERADOES DRIVEN FROM THE HOUSE IN HOT HASTE.

The Men Had Entered Miss Buhler's Store and Residence at No. 2104 Clark Avenue, One of Them Was Armed With a Hatchet, and Attacked and Attempted to Strangle the Women—After Shooting Her Assistant Miss Buhler Fired at the Man Who Had Attacked Miss Maggie Sanford and Forced Him to Flee—Both Men Escaped.

A burglary, theft and desperate assault on two women was committed by two men at No. 2104 Clark avenue at 6:40 this morning, but through the pluck of a woman, the thieves carried away nothing but bullet wounds. The burglars went to the notion store of Miss Christina Buhler at that number, passed along the side of the building to the rear of a kitchen located in the rear of the shop, forced open this door and ransacked the kitchen. Then they cut through a door leading to Miss Buhler's chamber-over-head, passed up the stairs to her bed room door, and just as she opened it to descend for the day one of the men seized her by the throat and the other passed in and attacked Miss

Miss Christina Buhler.

Maggie Sanford, Miss Buhler's employee and companion, Miss Buhler, although being strangled, managed to reach her revolver, which lay in the bed, and fired it at the intruder. The bullet struck her, in the upper part of the breast. He turned and fled down stairs and his companion, who had seized Miss Buhler, was met at the door with a hatchet, followed his example. Miss Buhler fired several shots after the assailing men fled, but did not know who wounded them. The "fellow" ran west on No. 2104 Clark avenue, turned into a side yard, ran across the yard to the alley and made their escape across the railroad tracks alongside the Twenty-first Street Bridge. Miss Buhler lost

THE BURGLAR'S FLIGHT.

After the man had eluded Miss Buhler they pursued the wildest kind of flight through the chicken yard of 2104 Clark avenue and into the alley south twenty yards and then across the railroad tracks into another street, thence onto Twenty-first street, down to the left of the bridge across and in a minute over the railroad tracks. Several men saw them running, but no one had presence of mind or nerve enough to follow them through the passed Twenty-first street Thomas A. Kyler, an employee of the G. F. Swift & Bro. Commission Co. at south Twenty-first street, was standing in the doorway.

The tall man was about twenty paces in front of Kyler when he heard a sharp crack, was rapidly outfooting him. I could not tell, however, whether the one behind was injured, but as he was in thought in the shop on the shop, he was all in front they passed me I heard the one in front call back to the short man: "Don't follow me." Kyler, who was in the shop, and chatted with the various reporters who called at the house and appeared not in the least bit excited.

THE TWO WOMEN.

Miss Buhler is a stout, rugged woman of middle age, red cheeked and wholesome, and by every move and pose showing that she has long ago ceased to depend on any, one, either for defense or support. She has the typical Teutonic energy of expression and hesitates not to call a man a "hussy" or a "bitch" in the looks of the honest, self-reliant, virtuous woman throughout, and is one of the last women in the country to be won over to the cause of the people. She is a member of the Democratic Party and was the chief engineer of the Grange movement against Tammany Hall.

Mr. Peckham was until 1879 a member of the New York State Assembly, and was rapidly outfooting him. I could not tell, however, whether the one behind was injured, but as he was in thought in the shop on the shop, he was all in front they passed me I heard the one in front call back to the short man: "Don't follow me." Kyler, who was in the shop, and chatted with the various reporters who called at the house and appeared not in the least bit excited.

THE PREMISES.

Miss Buhler has been in business at No. 2104 Clark avenue for two years. She is in a one-story building, half of which is a kitchen and over the kitchen a small sleeping room. Miss Buhler's business is that of new and notions dealer, and she is well filled with inexpensive merchandise.

To this fact Miss Buhler attributes the attack. She believes that the amount and variety of goods she has in stock, and the fact that she had money as well as goods, but she declares that in reaching this conclusion the burglar was not to be blamed.

At the west side of the small kitchen is an old door without panels and very poorly secured by an old lock. On a side, a yard, there gives access to a good back yard space about 20 feet by 40 feet in length back to the rear of the house. Miss Sanford, who had declared that the door could be forced open with anything, at least about six inches of the edge next to the door.

The miscreants had some time in the kitchen, for they went into Miss Buhler's cupboard and secured it of a good supply of new and notions, and left it there to demonstrate their ingratitude for this involuntary hospitality by leaving the room in a state of disorder. The work-house, the burglar attacked a light pine door leading into the kitchen, breaking it over a bolt on the inside, and then pulled this bolt clear through the door, so that it would not be possible to close it again.

Miss Buhler was sent to the Work-house for four months.

Miss Buhler has since been arrested and sentenced to the Work-house for four months.

The first effort of the thieves was directed toward getting into the store through the back door. But that door is of fairly substantial construction, and has three locks. One is the box lock through which the handle passes; one a new eight foot, and the third a bolt. This door, however, can only be forced by breaking it inside the store. The box lock was secured with a key and the night latch sprung by Miss Buhler, who had the key in her pocket.

She passed into the kitchen, locking the door behind her, and so could not throw the key. The burglar, however, had the key, and, after clipping off with the hatchet about six inches of the edge next to the door, he was able to open it.

IGHT CHOLERA.

Recognition of the Scourge in the Sunday Civil Appropriations Bill.

AN UNEXPENDED BALANCE OF $700,000 REMAINING FROM LAST YEAR.

Provision Made for the Use of This Large Amount Should the Epidemic from Asia Reach Us This Season—An Adequate Financial Safeguard—Washington Happenings and Gossip.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Recognition of the possibilities that the cholera wave, which has been making progress around the world from Asiatic sources the past two years, may reach the United States next summer is made in the sundry civil appropriations bill now before Congress.

No direct appropriation for fighting the cholera is made, but one clause of the bill provides for the use of the large unexpended balance remaining from last year's appropriations for this purpose. The sum of $600,000 was provided for fighting the cholera and other epidemic diseases, as there was thought to be at that time imminent danger of an invasion of the plague.

While the good and eminent officers of the Marine Hospital service were employed through most of the summer in efforts to ward off the scourge which had gained a foothold in Europe, there was, then, a yellow fever in Georgia, demanding their attention, but $200,000 of the appropriation was used, and the balance, $700,000, remains untouched in the Treasury.

There was some discussion in the meetings of the sub-committees which drew the sundry civil bill as to whether the large sum should be devoted into the fund for the use of the President, or of the Marine Hospitals, or whether an entirely new appropriation under different conditions should be recommended. It was decided to leave the balance of $700,000 as an emergency fund to be drawn upon in case of need and to place it at the disposal of the President, as had been done last year. The President is empowered to draw upon it in case of actual or threatened cholera, yellow fever, smallpox, or other epidemic diseases, as there was thought to be at that time imminent danger of an invasion of the plague.

Surgeon General Blyden of the Marine Hospital Service, under whose supervision the strict enforcement of the quarantine laws was carried out last summer, says that he considers this an ample safeguard so far as financial precautions can go against the cholera. Although he need not have done so, he suggested the creation of sufficient money to start the fiscal year with the same sum, $600,000, which was at his command last year, he is well satisfied with the action taken.

LAND LEGISLATION.

A Long Contest Between the House and Senate May Take Place.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—The action of the House Committee on Public Lands yesterday, in refusing to report favorably a bill sent over from the Senate granting a certain amount of the proceeds of the sales of public lands for the schools of mines, will probably be the beginning of a long contest between the House and the Senate in the matter of land legislation.

The Senate Committee on Public Lands is made up of Western men. In the House there are a good many Western men on the Committee who do not come from the mining States or from those States where the great bulk of public lands are now located. It has been proposed by the Senate Committee, and approved by the Senate, that the proceeds of the sale of public lands be used for the schools of mines, which is the only way in which the Senate can give a favorable consideration to the bill.

"Mother" Husband Dying.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6.—Mrs. Mary Husband (Mother Husband), who gave three years to service as a nurse with the Army of the Potomac, is dying in this city at the age of 73 years. She is a granddaughter of Robert E. Lee, and a member of the Lee family.

The Senate Committee on Public Lands is made up of Western men. In the House there are a good many Western men on the Committee who do not come from the mining States or from those States where the great bulk of public lands are now located. It has been proposed by the Senate Committee, and approved by the Senate, that the proceeds of the sale of public lands be used for the schools of mines, which is the only way in which the Senate can give a favorable consideration to the bill.

INCOME TAX BENEFITS.

Why Some Men Favor the Proposed Plan of Increasing the Revenue.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Men who are seeking fortunes in the matrimonial field should naturally be interested in having the income tax become a law, according to what an old Treasury official said to a POST-DISPATCH correspondent to-day. This old official was connected with the collection bureau of income tax when that law was in force and was affected by it.

Consul T. M. Tarnay, of St. Louis, Missouri, who was one of the most enthusiastic members of the Ways and Means Committee favoring this tax, participated in the conversation with the old official and the correspondent. The Missouri Congressman maintained that the number who would pay taxes on incomes which they do not enjoy would be far greater than anyone supposes. The American trait of saving money is a strong one, he said, and will show more clearly than ever if the Wilson bill, as it now stands, becomes a law.

The amount of native flour used in the United States is about 1,200,000 bushels of American wheat flour. No American wheat is ever imported. He thinks the import duty is about $1.65 per barrel.
